A variety of growth factors have been proposed as one of the mechanisms of the proliferation of glial and smooth muscle cells in the developing brain, which is believed to take place during the pathogenesis of cerebral infarct. It is suggested that such growth factors are released from neurons, and participate in the morphological and physiological processes of cerebral tissue and vessels. However, their precise roles in the pathophysiology of cerebral infarct have not been determined yet. The therapeutic potential of a number of growth factors for the treatment of cerebral infarct was reviewed.Q: How do I validate whether a regex expression is true or false with cmd? Pirenzepine is a muscarinic antagonist which is effective in healing peptic ulcers. A single-dose, randomized, double-blind comparison of the effects of pirenzepine and ranitidine, 400 mg orally once daily for 8 days, was performed in 30 duodenal ulcer patients. Ulcer healing was assessed endoscopically on days 2, 4, and 8. Two-hour intragastric pH was also monitored on days 4 and 8. At 8 days, pirenzepine resulted in healing of 86% of ulcers as compared with 58% healing in the ranitidine group (p less than 0.01). There was no significant difference between the two agents in the speed of healing. There was no significant difference in the percentage of time that intragastric pH was below 4 in the two groups.
